

People are talking about...

ParcSlope for MacBook and iPad Pro

“Considering how many Apple devices (and likely others) the ParcSlope works with, its pleasing presentation angle, excellent craftsmanship and reasonable price, this stand has earned a place on my crowded desk. That in itself is something.”

– MacObserver

“Couple great design and functionality with a name aimed to please Apple history buffs, and you can do no wrong.”

– Run Around Tech

“Our final judgment is that ParcSlope is certainly great, a real partner that improves productivity when used with iPad Pro: it adjusts the screen to a more natural position and prevents use of the iPad flat on the table. Well made and stylish, it’s more of a piece of furniture, not just an accessory.”

– Macitynet Italy

“If you’re looking for a simple way to lift a MacBook to a more ergonomic height on your desk, or want to lift an iPad Pro to the kind of angle many hold a sketchpad, the ParcSlope may well be for you.”

– 9to5 Mac

“You get a two-fer with the ParcSlope from Twelve South, it's good for both your iPad Pro and MacBook... perfect for comfortably using either device. In particular with the iPad Pro it's a perfect angle to type on the touchscreen or use the Apple Pencil.”

– iMore

“The design is elegant and timeless.”

– PocketPC (translated from German)

